

Dear colleagues,

I would like to draw your attention on the following training opportunity for educators, explainers from museums/science and outreach centres and young scientists organized by Ecsite.

Please feel free to forward this to anyone that might be interested. Thank you!

You may like to discuss this opportunity with Hugh or Anna especially if you wanted some advise with the Grundtvik grant.

NEW Pilots Training Course

A new edition of the “Pilots Training Course for Museum Explainers, Educators and Young Scientists involved in outreach programmes” organized by Ecsite is coming up at the Pavilion of Knowledge – Ciência Viva in Lisbon, Portugal, from 17 to 21 September 2012.

It's a five-day interactive and intensive annual summer school that will include workshops, debates and presentations from experienced European trainers.

The course is aimed at explainers (also called animators, guides, edutainers, facilitators, mediators, pilots, etc.) who work in science centres, museums, science festivals or outreach programmes of research institutes and universities and come into face-to-face contact with the public.

Grundtvig Grants are available! The code for the course is: PT-2012-087-001.
